CAN YOU GUESS.

Here's a Chance to Make
Ten Dollars Easy.

All You Have to Do Is to Pick the Winners in the Coming
Primary.

Just for the interest attached to a guessing contest, and to put a little more interest into the coming campaign for County officers, The News will give its readers a chance to make ten dollars and have a little fun at guessing on the side.

To the person making the first nearest correct guess of the winners in the Democratic Primary Election which will be held in this county on Saturday, June 1st, 1901, The News will present a ten dollar gold piece. The conditions of the contest are simple. Old subscribers and new subscribers who pay $2 on their subscriptions will each be entitled to a guess, and to as many guesses as they pay year subscription. If no one guesses correctly, the first one who guesses the closest to all the winners will receive the ten dollars.

You intend to pay your subscription anyway, and you may as well pay before the first day of June and have a chance of getting your money back, besides gaining the distinction of knowing more about the political situation than our neighbors.

Each guess will be registered when received as to the exact date, hour and minute. No one will be permitted to see how any one else has guessed. In guessing on the offices on the ballot are to be considered.

FOR THE CHILDREN

A Chinese Kindergarten Game.

"One bright spring afternoon a Chinese official and his little boy called at our home, on Filial Piety lane, in Peking. Father and son were dressed exactly alike—both of black velvet, trousers of blue silk over which hung a long garment also of blue silk, waistcoat of blue brocade and skullcap of black satin. In every respect, even to the dignity of his bearing, the child was a vest pocket edition of his father.

"The boy carried a tin of blocks, which I recognized as 'The Fifteen Magic Blocks.' Now, a tin is two or three volumes of a book wrapped in a single cover. The one that the boy had contained two volumes. On the inside of the cover was a depression three inches square, snugly fitted with the 15 blocks. These blocks are made variously of lead, wood or pasteboard.

"All the blocks are in pairs, except one, which is a rhomboid, and all are exactly proportional, the sides being either half an inch, an inch and a half or two inches in length.

"The blocks of Chinese children are not used as in our kindergartens, simply to familiarize the child with geometric figures. The more specific purpose of the 15 magical blocks is to picture scenes of history and myth that will have a moral and intellectual effect on the budding brain. Of course Chinese children build houses, bridges and wagons just as ours do, but primarily their blocks are intended for education.

"The first picture my child visitor built for me that afternoon was a dragon on horse. I asked him to tell me about it. The little fellow explained that this was the dragon horse of Fu Hsi. Fu Hsi was the original ancestor of the Chinese people, and he saw this animal emerge from the depths of the Meng river. On the back of the dragon horse Fu Hsi described a map containing 55 spots. These 55 spots represented the male and female principles of nature, and out of them the ancient sage used to construct what are known as the eight diagrams."—Isaac T. Headland in Ainslee's.

Black Hawk and the Lieutenant.

Black Hawk was an Indian chief, ruler of the Sacs and Foxes who lived in the northwestern part of Illinois many years ago. In 1832 Black Hawk led his tribe in war against the white settlers to resist the attempt of the United States government to move his people to a reservation west of the Mississippi river. The United States sent many soldiers into Illinois to overcome the red men, and several battles were fought. Among the soldiers from Illinois was a young man over 6 feet tall and as awkward as he was tall. He was Abraham Lincoln, afterward president of the United States. In the forces of the white men was a young lieutenant from the state of Mississippi. He was only 23 years old, but was bright and alert. No sooner had the old chief Black Hawk seen this young officer than he took a decided liking to him, and the lieutenant also rejoiced in the friendship of the Indian. Black Hawk lived through all these trials until Black Hawk died. That young lieutenant was Jefferson Davis, afterward president of the government formed by the seceding southern states.—Chicago Record.

The Horse That Fed His Friend.

There were two horses, one of them blind, belonging to a country doctor out west, who for 18 years drove them on his rounds of visiting, generally harnessing them together.

One evening the doctor took out his blind horse alone and drove him until late. On his return he put the horse into a stall next to that of his mate, there being a tight board partition between them from floor to ceiling. Then he threw some ears of corn into the manger and went indoors.

By and by the doctor was startled by curious sounds from the table, and he took a lantern and went to see what was the matter. As he drew near he heard the two mates malling and answering each other in cheerful tones, and when he looked into the stable there was the blind horse pushing ears of corn to his friend through a big knot hole in the partition. The two old chums were having a brotherly chat and enjoying it all the more because they were going halves in something good to eat.—St. Nicholas.

Brave and Active.

Marie D. Parsons, of Elmhurst, N. Y., was only 10 years old when, seeing a man and a child swept off a pleasure boat by the boom and observing that the child clung to the man so that the latter could make no headway, she sprang into a small boat and reached the spot just in time to save these two lives.

A Songless Bird.

Birds without song belong to Hawaii. In Honolulu one sees a bird about the size of our robin, an independent sort of fellow that walks about like a chicken, and it has no song.

Lullaby.

A song for the little little Bo-peep: Come, wee Willie Winkle, and sing her to sleep. This is the road to Blankletpetown.

Come, press down her eyelids and sing in her ear The wonderful songs that in dreamland we hear.

The chiming of the waters, the drone of the bees, The tales that the blossoms are telling the breeze,

For, spite of her crowing and cooing, I see The baby is sleepy as sleepy can be.

Down tutter the eyelids, dear little Bo-peep; Now whistle Willie Winkle, she's gone fast to sleep.

Did You Ever Dream a Fly?

Whatever other fate might befall it, naturalists agree that the common house fly cannot be drowned and many experiments have been made in relation thereto.

Included in such tests was the immersion of a fly in a tumbler of cold water, with a piece of cardboard to fit the glass and floated so as to keep the insect beneath the surface.

So little did the fly trouble about such a mode of death that it kept near the bottom of the glass, and there for a quarter of an hour ran about as freely as in the fresh air, while at times crawled across the underside of the pasteboard as on the ceiling of a room.

After being immersed for 20 minutes the fly's movements were less active, and at 25 minutes it turned over on its side, apparently dead. It hung suspended in the water just under the pasteboard, which kept it from rising to the surface, and there it remained for another 25 minutes.

It was then taken up and placed on a sheet of paper, looking to all appearance dead. Its next fate was to be buried by being covered with about half a teaspoonful of fine salt.

At the end of 15 minutes the saline was shaken off, the fly having thus been completely covered either by water or by salt for 65 minutes.

Immediately upon its release the insect trimmed its wings and legs actively for awhile and then flew away.—Pearson's Weekly.

Why Monarchs Were Insane.

Pathologists have often pointed out the fact that physical and mental enervation are apt to go hand in hand, and the intellectual degeneracy of etiquette monarchs may have a good deal to do with the Sybaritism of their palace life.

The plebeian functions which medieval sovereigns were obliged to perform by proxy included the adjustment of their gait gloves. They had dunkies to remove their cravats and warm their nightshirts, unroll their pigstails and tuck up their bedclothes around their shoulders. In the morning courtiers competed for the honor of holding their washbasins. Peers of the realm waited on bended knees to buckle their shoes. If the inheritor of a legitimate throne lifted a spoon to break an egg, lynx eyed lackeys anticipated his needs with the agility of trained conjurers. Like his food, his information on current topics was served ready dressed and cooked, till he turned into a masticating machine and repeater of conventional twaddle.—Lippincott's.

Saved Each Other.

A short time ago a guard on one of the Northern expresses while at a big station in the midland had been talking to the engine driver. Presently he stepped aside and gave his "Right away" when a gentleman who was late sprang on to the footboard while the train was in motion and tried to obtain admission to one of the compartments.

As the carriage came along the guard seized him by the coat and pulled him off, remarking that he must think himself lucky, for he had practically saved his life.

As this conversation was going on the guard's van came by, and the guard, with that gracefulness acquired by constant practice, saluted majestically on to his van.

The gentleman, who had taken in the situation, thereupon seized him by the coat and pulled him off, saying as the train sped away:

"One good turn deserves another. You saved my life; I have saved yours. Now we are quits."—London Telegraph.

He Got Off.

The wife of a German farmhand in Ohio was taken sick and finally died, the husband, of course, leaving his work for several days in consequence.

Two weeks later he appeared at the house of his employer and asked to be relieved from work for a couple of days, when the following conversation took place:

"I would like to get off for about two days."

"I can't spare you unless it is absolutely necessary. You know you lost several days two weeks ago, and we are behind in the work. What is the necessity for your getting off?" Inquired the farmer.

"Well, I was to be married."

"Why, Fritz, your wife died only two weeks ago, and now you are about to get married again? I do not understand that."

"Well," replied the German, "I don't hold spite long."

The farmer dismissed the case without prejudice.

Pretty Far Off.

A summer resident in a New Hampshire village, a lady who, in Horace Walpole's phrase, "sits at the top of the world" was making her first friendly call of the season upon the family of an old widower.

Only the father was at home, one of the girls being absent on a visit to the other sister, who had been married during the past winter. Naturally the talk turned on the daughters.

"Yes," said the father; "Mary made out real well. But I don't know's I'll ever work Elizabeth off. There's a young man been comin here steady now for two year, an he's no further on yet, m'm, than me an you."—Youth's Companion.

Swells With Swell Chests.

"I had occasion to examine two brothers who had applied for policies in our company the other day," said the medical examiner of a life insurance company. "One was 35 years old and the other was 33. They are both unmarried and are known about town as pretty gay boys. Usually there is considerable attached to writing policies for men who are known as 'rounders,' but these two proved to be perfect specimens of physical manhood.

"I was particularly impressed by their chest developments. They both had the same measurement and also the same expansion—from 39 to 43. When I found that they had smoked cigarettes from boyhood, I wondered all the more at the four inch expansion. Then they told me that when they were youngsters they used to delight in seeing how long they could hold their breath under water. Every time they took a bath in the tub one would take a deep breath, duck under, and the other would time him with a watch. A minute and a half, I believe, was the limit of their endurance. They said it was all their mother could do to get them out of the bath and drive them to bed."—Philadelphia Record.

Both Expert in Logic.

"Tom," said a father to his son whose school report showed him to have been an idle young scamp, "what have you been studying this term?"

"Logic, father," replied Tom. "I can prove you are not here now."

"Indeed! How so?"

"Well, you must be either at Rome or elsewhere?"

"Certainly."

"You are not at Rome?"

"No."

"Then you must be elsewhere."

"Just so."

"And if you are elsewhere you clearly can't be here."

For answer the father took up a cane that lay near and laid it smartly across his son's back.

"Don't!" cried Tom. "You are hurting me."

"Not at all. You have just proved conclusively that I am not here, so I can't be hurting you."

Before his stern parent had quite done with him Tom felt that there must be after all a flaw somewhere in his logic.—London Tit-Bits.

An Early Riser.

"Pat," a manager told one of his workmen, "you must be an early riser. I always find you at work the first thing in the morning."

"Indeed and O, am, sir. It's a family trait, your father."

"Then your father was an early riser too?"

"Me father, is it? He rises that early that if he went to bed a little later he'd meet himself gettin up in the mornin'."

A Rabelais Hoax.

Rabelais, being out of money, once tricked the police into taking him from Marseilles to Paris on a charge of treason. He made up some packages of brick dust and labeled them "Poison for the royal family." The officers took Rabelais 700 miles, only to be told at the end of their journey that it was April 1 and the affair was a hoax. Of course, as Rabelais was the privileged wit of the royal family, he was forgiven.

Not Peculiar.

Jess—Yes; I know her very well.

Tess—Do you? What was her maiden name?

Jess—I suppose her maiden aim was to get married.—Philadelphia Press.

The Coming Carnival.

Everything is progressing smoothly in the preparations for the coming carnival of Garth Lodge, A. O. U. W., on June 12th. In a few days the city and county will be covered with advertising matter. It is already a certainty that there will be an enormous crowd in town that day, and the committee is striving in every way to make it a day of enjoyment that will not soon be forgotten by those who are lucky enough to be there.

If the amusement committee succeed in getting the flying machine it will be one of the greatest events in the history of the State. Almost every one has seen a balloon, but it is hardly probable that there is a person in the whole county who has seen a flying machine.

If the merchants will only help out the committee on advertising when they come around with the program, by giving them a generous advertisement, the committee will guarantee to cover the entire county and part of the neighboring counties with the programmes and other printing, and there will be a crowd in Paris on that day such as has never before been seen. In the next issue of the News we will endeavor to give an outline of the program for the entire day.

Our suits fit. They are the best on earth. Come in and try on one. You will not be importuned to buy.

Desirable Location For Hospital.

ACCORDING to an advertisement which will appear in the next issue of THE NEWS, the Ingles property on Upper Main street will shortly be sold at public auction by the owner, Mr. Mayo, of Pineville. We understand that the property must be sold at this time for what it will bring.

This would be the very best location in Paris for the proposed hospital. The residence on it, with the addition of a wing, would be amply large enough for the present. The large grounds surrounding it could be beautified at a small expense, and would be a splendid place for convalescents to take exercise. It is located far enough from the heart of the city and back from the street to be free from all objectionable noises, and still is close enough to be of easy access. Those who have been considering the matter of building a hospital in Paris should consider this suggestion and be prepared to act on the day the property is sold.

Panic In Wall Street.

This much-heralded panic in Wall Street, which had been heralded in dispatches to the daily papers, arrived Wednesday. It began on "Change at 1 o'clock and was attended by a frenzy of excitement. A perfect frenzy seemed to seize the speculators in stocks, and fortunes were swept away in the twinkling of an eye. Thousands who were rich men at luncheon went home to their dinner penniless. Northern Pacific was the cause of the trouble. The trouble began at 1 o'clock.

Men rushed to hurl their stocks into the market. Everything was sacrificed without regard to real or possible value. Brokers made the Exchange a pandemonium with their shouts and struggles to be first in the rush to sell.

When Northern Pacific sold at 180 Jack Manning had the nerve to hand out 1,000 shares to the bidder, and it was a short sale at that. He started to write down a memorandum of the sale, and before he had scribbled the name of the buyer he bought back the 1,000 shares at 160, clearing up $20,000, less $30 revenue stamps, in less than one minute and 50 seconds. Manning now holds the record to make a quick turn.

Patronize Paris People.

There are plenty of young men and women in Paris amply competent in every way to fill any position of trust which is to be awarded. There is no reason for going outside of the city for any person to fill any position of that kind. Wm. Garth, through his noble generosity, has endowed the young men of Paris with the necessary educational advantages to enable them to acceptably fill any position where brains and education is required. If our merchants have around them and see if there are not enough young men who are honest, reliable and competent. The same is true of any branch of business, private or public.

Fugitive Taylor Buys a Home.

Fugitive W. S. Taylor, of Kentucky, has purchased a residence at 2121 North Delaware street, Indianapolis, Ind., from former Judge Hackney, of the Supreme Court, and his friends believe he has received assurances of protection and has determined to make that State his future home.

The assurance that Governor Durbin will not honor a requisition for his return to Kentucky is said to have come indirectly through the Executive office, but not from the Governor himself, but it is so direct that Taylor feels that there is no probability of his being surrendered. He paid $9,000 for his new home, which is located in one of the most slightly residence districts in the city.

"Mr. Altmyer will be with Mr. Price for a couple of weeks and will then go to Paris, Kentucky, where he will embark into business again. Taylorville people will be sorry to lose George and his estimable wife, but will wish them unbounded success in their new home."

—Dr. E. H. Pearce, of this city, who has been supplying pastorate of Memorial Methodist church at Paris, Ky., the past year, is slowly recovering from several weeks of severe illness. By order of his physicians he will discontinue all ministerial work, for a period. Desiring to be left without ministerial work, he, however, at request of Bishop Hendrix last September, undertook supply of the church at Paris the present year. Both congregation and community have been most appreciative of his ministry. Rev. J. M. Fugate, W. C. '90, and now of Theological Seminary at Vanderbilt university, will supply pulpit in Dr. Pearce's absence.—Danville Advocate.

RICHMOND COURT.—There were about 1,200 head of various grades of cattle at the stock yards about half of which found buyers at prices ranging from 4c to 5½c. Only a few brought the better price, owing to the poor outlook for grass. The horse and mule market was exceedingly dull, only ten or twelve of each changed hands. These were not the best—rather of medium grade. Horses sold from $70 to $110. One mule brought $100. The others, less money.

S. A. Deatherage sold to J. W. & A. Ballard a bunch of 35 fat heifers for July delivery at 4½ cents. J. W. Bales bought of John S. Deatherage a lot of 1200 pound cattle at 4½ cents. Matrimonial.

Louisville, Ky., May 9, 1901.

DR. P. N. FOLEY, Paris, Ky.

Miss Shackelford and I are married. Meet me at the Reed Hotel to-night, Wm.

The above telegram received by Dr. Phil Foley yesterday afternoon tells the story of quite a romantic elopement and marriage. The principals were Dr. Wm. Kenney, of the firm of Sweeney & Kenney, of this city, son of Mr. Charles Kenney, of Glenkenney Station, and Miss Mand Shackelford, a native of Harrodsburg.

Miss Shackelford, who is a trained nurse, connected with the Good Samaritan Hospital at Lexington, was upon her vacation. Dr. Kenney, with malice aforethought, told his friends here he was suddenly called to Louisville to see a patient. The patient was Miss Shackelford, who since her first meeting with Dr. Kenney, which took place while she was nursing a patient of his several months since, has been afflicted with a trouble of the heart, which, strange to say communicated itself to the doctor.

The only balm for the two aching hearts was the services of a minister, so they fled themselves to Louisville and were made one.

They were met at the depot in Lexington by Dr. Foley, who accompanied them home, they arriving on the 6:15 train yesterday morning, and are now receiving the congratulations of a host of friends.

Dr. Kenney is a grandson of Dr. Wm. Kenney, for whom he was named, and who for years was one of the leading medical practitioners of this city. His grandson is showing every indication of following in his footsteps. Miss Shackelford is a very prepossessing young lady, and comes from one of the best families in the State. She seems by her charming disposition to have the happy faculty of making and keeping friends, and will be a valuable helpmeet to her husband in his professional career. The News joins in wishing the happy young couple a long and happy journey on the matrimonial sea.

Dr. Kenney and wife will for the present take board at the Hotel Fordham, but they expect to go to house-keeping in the near future.

The following from the Terrell (Tex.) Star will be of interest to the many old friends of Mr. Joe Keller, brother of the Hon. John W. Keller, of New York City, both of whom were born and raised in this country.

At the beautiful residence of Mrs. J. P. Keller, on Virginia street in this city on Sunday night, the 7th instant, occurred a wedding that was interesting because of the popular characters of the contracting parties. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. G. Lyle Smith, Joe Keller, our city Marshal, to Mrs. J. P. Keller, widow of Jim Keller, who for ten years was the sheriff of this county. Jim Keller, in his time was highly regarded as a man, and without exception was considered the most popular officer the county ever had; his widow shared his popularity and deservedly so.

Joe Keller, now our city marshal, has held that position for twelve years and at almost every election during the time has made the race without opposition. He is a fearless officer and shares the confidence of the best people in the city, who esteem him as a citizen and officer. May this union be a happy one and the pathway of their lives ever carpeted with pleasure is our wish. They left for Mineral Wells on Monday morning's train and will be absent for two weeks, after which time their home, on corner Virginia street and Asylum avenue, will be open to their friends.

The Cincinnati Post says Abner Buchanan of this county and Miss Ethel Harris, of Lexington, made arrangements to meet in Cincinnati Tuesday and get married. Her father, who opposed the match, learned of her elopement, and overtook her at the Central depot, just as Abner's train pulled into the station. She went by the L. & N., he by the Q. and C. and Abner by the C. and O. The marriage was postponed.

Mr. John G. Roberts, of Mt. Sterling, and Miss Nora Aitken Daugherty, of Flemingsburg, were united in matrimony in the latter city on Tuesday last.

You Do, or You Don't Need Glasses.

The eye being a rather delicate organ, great care should be exercised in the selection of proper glasses. Many believe that glasses should be restored to only when the sight becomes so defective as not to be able to do without. This is a great mistake which must be combated. Whenever there is unmistakable evidence of the need of their aid, they should be used. A neglect of this rule sometimes produces mischief which results in serious trouble if the course be persisted in. Our Dr. C. H. BOWEN having just returned from taking a special course in Optics from one of the best specialists in New York, is prepared to do the best of work, having the latest improved methods of fitting.

HIS PINK HASH.

The Story of a Big Cabbage Crop and a Gussied Deceased Husband.

By SUSAN BROWN ROBBINS.

[Copyright, 1920, by American Press Association.]
"There! You're always complaining that we never had cabbage enough," said Enos Soper as he drove up to the cellar door and stopped. "I guess there'll be enough for you this year. There's all the horse wanted to draw, and you can have 'em all to yourself. I won't rob you of one of 'em." And he chuckled.

His wife, Betsey, had come out to see the load. She looked at it critically. "There's a good lot of 'em, sure enough," she said. She reached up and took a large head off the cart. "It's as heavy as can be. I don't know when I've seen such a handsome mess of cabbages. Won't they be good next winter, though?"

"I hope you'll like 'em," said Enos, going down the cellar steps with two heads held by the roots in each hand. "You won't get me to taste of 'em."

As she went back into the house Betsey Soper smiled broadly. "I won't, won't I?" she said, and then she smiled again.

"I suppose she thinks she can eat all those," said Enos as he got the last head in its place on the cellar bottom. "Well, I could tell her, only she wouldn't believe it, that just about two-thirds of them cabbages will go to the neighbors and to the hens before spring comes."

"Going to have a boiled dish for dinner?" he asked a week later, coming into the kitchen in the middle of the forenoon. "That's good."

"It's so queer you like a boiled dinner and don't like cabbage," said Betsey at dinner time. "Won't you just try a little more? It's the best cabbage I ever saw."

"No, thank you," said Enos jocularly. "I'm afraid there won't be enough left for you. I'll eat the other things and that pink hash you make, but I draw the line at cabbage."

The next morning Betsey went into the pantry to make the hash. She put cold potatoes, turnip, one small carrot and two small beets into the chopping tray; then she removed the cover from a large earthen dish and took out two generous forkfuls of cold cabbage, which she also put in the tray.

When Enos came in to breakfast, the pink hash was steaming hot in the middle of the table, and beside Betsey's plate was a small dish of warmed over cabbage.

"This is 'mazing good hash, Betsey," Enos said as he helped himself for the third time. "I'm sorry the turnips didn't turn out any better. Perhaps you'll have to be a little sparing of 'em."

"All right," said Betsey demurely. Through the fall and winter pink hash appeared frequently on the Sopers' table. Only once did Enos make any criticism of it.

"This hash ain't so good as common," he said. "What's the matter with it? It tastes different, somehow."

"Perhaps it ain't salt enough," Betsey suggested. "Tasted different," she said after he had gone out. "Of course it did! I've been putting in about half the bulk of cabbage, and this morning he was fussing round the pantry all the time, and I didn't have a chance to put it in without his seeing me, and there's so few turnips, no wonder it tasted queer."

"The last cabbage," Betsey said one day toward spring. Enos laid down his knife and fork and stared at his wife. "The last cabbage?" he echoed.

She nodded. "He said nothing more, but after dinner he went down cellar."

"How many of them cabbages have you thrown away?" he demanded when he came up again.

"Not one," answered Betsey. "I did give two to Sister Abby, but all the rest have been eaten in this room."

Enos looked at her in awed amazement. "I wouldn't 'a' thought you could 'a' done it," he said, and he went out without another word.

At night, however, the cabbages seemed still to weigh on his mind. "Had I better raise more this year?" he asked.

"No," she answered. "I think there were just enough this year."

"I should 'a' thought it would 'a' made you sick," he said thoughtfully. "Well, it didn't, and I guess you needn't worry about it any more. I don't believe there's anything much cheaper than that you could feed me on."

Enos laughed. "I don't know there is," he agreed.

"The invention of powder," he said. "It occurred to an alchemist one day that it would be a fine thing to take sulphur, saltpeter and dried toads, pound them all to a powder and 'sublime' them together in an alembic, which he carefully luted and set on the furnace to heat," says Harvey Sutherland in Alchemist's. "He poked up the fire and waited around, thinking what he would do with his money if this should turn out to be the powder of reduction that would turn base metals into gold, when bang went the alembic, and the windows blew out, and the door ripped off its hinges and fell down, blam! The alchemist scurried out from under the ruins of the furnace, shook a red-hot coal or two out of his shoe and the ashes of himself and wondered who had burnt him. He tried it again and again and each time with the same result, and then it dawned upon him that he had discovered a fair article of blasting powder. Since then about all that has been done to his recipe has been to put in a little better article of charcoal, and that of willow twigs, instead of toasted toads."

The SPORTING WORLD

Tod Sloan's Going Abroad.

Tod Sloan, the premier American jockey, who made such a good showing in the Grand American handicap for the professional wing shot championship of the United States, will leave for England about the middle of May. He is going abroad to make application for renewal of his license, which was withdrawn by the English Jockey club last year.

Sloan is of the opinion that he will be allowed to ride in England again. In speaking of his future plans a few days ago he said:

"I do not fear the result of my application. The English Jockey club stewards are men of sterling character. They have always been fair to me in every respect. When they hear my side of the story, I believe they will reconsider their former action and will give me a license."

"If a license is granted me, I will return to America about the middle of the season. It is my intention to make flying visits back and forth between America and England."

"I have not been engaged to ride for any particular stable. I will free lance until I can see my way clear to a good engagement."

"The story circulated that I lost heavily at the recent races in France is only true in part. As a jockey I did not bet, but as an owner I did put down a few wagers. The amount that I lost did not hurt me much financially."

"My lady was a bad investment, but Credo proved his worth several times over. Credo is by long odds the best cross country horse in America. No weight in reason is too heavy for him, no route too long. He is en route to New York. I will enter him in all the stake events. I may ship him to England, but had not decided on this action at present."

Costume Restrictions For Cyclists.
The National Cycling Association's racing board of control has determined that cyclists shall hereafter observe the proprieties of dress when taking part in open race meets. One of the rules recently promulgated by the board has to do with evil of the past. Not only solid suits and those which offend by having no sleeves and extraordinarily low necks, but those hideous color combinations of other days are expressly forbidden. The rule reads as follows: "All riders will be required to appear in black breeches (knee tight), though stripes of any color may be used. The color of the shirt is optional. No attendant will be allowed on the track during a race meet unless his costume is neat and proper. Sleeveless undershirts, etc., will come within the objectionable style of attire."

The terms of the rule seem a little arbitrary, but if it succeeds in correcting an evil so general and so disagreeable to spectators it will not be criticised for its phraseology.

Brown to Coach Yale.
Walter Camp, Yale's chief athletic adviser, has stated that Yale's head football coach next fall will be Gordon Brown, captain of last year's championship eleven. It has been known for some time that Yale's football authorities were anxious to have Brown take command at New Haven, but it was said that business might interfere. Mr. Camp's positive declaration, however, that Brown will be the head coach will prove welcome news to the followers of the blue's fortunes.

Mr. Camp also stated that hereafter the plan of having the varsity captain chosen head coach for the ensuing fall would be put into effect.

"Yale will have to build up almost an entirely new eleven next fall," said Mr. Camp, "but 'Skin' Brown appears to be the man to accomplish this feat with the most success. He proved to be one of Yale's greatest football leaders, and he enjoys the confidence of the entire university."

Trainer Duke's Good Fortune.
William Duke, the American trainer and partner of Enoch Wishard, has fallen into a veritable gold mine by his engagement in England with Sir Thurley Salisbury. The Yankee handler is to look after the latter's stable interests at a salary of $25,000 a year and 10 per cent of the gross amount of the stakes and purses won by the horses in his charge. Duke has also been given carte blanche to select any horse he likes and to invest $50,000 to get stake winners in Sir Salisbury's stable. It was Duke's success with his string of seven horses last year that led to his fat engagement. With that number of thoroughbreds he won 33 races, the best percentage of winners turned out by any one trainer.

Baseball Career Ended.
President Charles Zimmer of the Players' Protective association and who last year played with the Pittsburgh National league has announced his retirement as a professional baseball player. Speaking of his retirement, Zimmer said: "I have been charged with double dealing and everything else by members of the Protective association. I desire to reiterate once more that I acted solely for the best interests of the players and with no selfish motive, as some of the latter continue to assert."

GLASGOW'S FINE SHOW.

Fine Arts and Music Striking Features of the Exhibition.

COVERS AREA OF SEVENTY ACRES.

It Will Be Second Only to Those in Chicago and Paris—Agricultural Hall, Model Farm and an Indian Theater Some of the Features. Duchess of Fife to Open It.

The good and enterprising people of Glasgow hope that the great exhibition which is to be held in that city will very soon be opened. That event has been twice delayed, once by an outbreak of the bubonic plague in one of the city's slums and again by the death of Queen Victoria. Lately snailpox has been prevalent in Glasgow, but it is confidently stated that the disease will be stamped out in a few days.

Meantime the exhibition buildings have been built and made ready for exhibitors. The externals are to all intents and purposes complete, and the visitor to Glasgow can already appreciate the size and grandeur of the undertaking, unsurpassed hitherto in the United Kingdom and yielding the palm only to Paris and Chicago, says the New York Journal.

The exhibition is to be covered by an area of 70 acres in the beautiful Kelvingrove park. The space is great, but that it will be fully occupied is now certain.

British exhibitors have of course come forward in great numbers, but foreign countries, in particular Austria, France, Japan and Russia—the government of the czar voted $30,000 to secure its adequate representation at the exhibition—are equally forward.

Within the grounds there already stand the Fine Art galleries, a permanent and handsome structure of red-dish stone, with a central hall 125 feet by 66 feet, 2 courts and 12 galleries, each 100 feet long. This is a memorial to the Glasgow exhibition of 1888, as it was from the surplus of $50,000 yielded by that exhibition that the building fund originated. In these galleries, to which there is probably no second in the kingdom, both British art and archaeology will be adequately represented.

The general grounds will be covered with restaurants, band stands and kiosks and will contain a bicycle track and a football ground, with room for some 30,000 spectators.

The total area covered by the exhibition buildings is 54,800 square yards, allocated thus: Industrial hall, 26,000 square yards; Grand avenue, 8,400 square yards; and Machinery hall, 8,400 square yards. The industrial hall is 600 feet in length and 325 feet in width and is traversed along the center by the main avenue, with a roof span of over 100 feet. This span covers to 50 feet at the center, where there arises an imposing dome of steel 100 feet in height, supported by four towers, the whole being crowned by a figure symbolizing electricity.

The exhibition will include an agricultural hall, a model farm, an Indian theater and above all the grand central hall, built in the Venetian style, accommodating 4,000 persons and containing an organ which is valued at over $2,000. As in 1888 the most famous bands of all nations will play in Kelvingrove park while the exhibition lasts. The Machinery hall is large, being fully 600 feet long and 300 feet wide, but the demands for the space within it have been such that it could have been filled many times over.

The king's daughter, the Duchess of Fife, will open the exhibition amid much splendor and in the presence of many notabilities. It is understood that a conditional promise from the king to visit the exhibition in the autumn has been privately secured. The present year witnesses great historical celebrations in Glasgow university and the visit to the city of the British association and other learned bodies. It is only the smallest epidemic can be staid, Glasgow will present incomparably more attractions to visitors than it did even in 1888.

A DINOSAUR RESTORED.
Yale Now Possesses One of Only Two Such Specimens in the World.

The giant dinosaur, which has been two years in restoration, is now completed and installed in the Peabody museum beside the restored skeletons of fellow prehistoric animals, says a New Haven dispatch. The New York Times. This is the first dinosaur ever restored in America and the second in the world. A comparison of the Yale specimen with the only one restored, the Brussels dinosaur, is in every way favorable to the American monster. The restoration was begun by the Professor Marsh and taken up by his successor, Professor Edward C. Beecher.

The length of the animal is 29 feet 3 inches. The height of the head above the base is 13 feet 2 inches. The height of the shoulders is 10 feet. The length of the tail is 33 feet 7 inches. The hind legs are 9 feet 5 inches in length.

Russian Timber to Be Exploited.
An English syndicate of timber merchants in London has arranged to send an agent to the south of Russia to the Caucasus for the purpose of organizing the regular exportation to England of Russian timber for building and manufacturing purposes, says an Odessa correspondent. The syndicate intends competing against the American exporters who have hitherto pretty well monopolized the English market. Particular attention is to be paid to Russian maple.

S. is not only a blood purifier, but an excellent tonic, and strengthens and builds up the constitution while purging the blood of impurities. S. S. S. cures all diseases of a blood poison origin, Cancer, Scrofula, Rheumatism, Chronic Sores and Ulcers, Eczema, Psoriasis, Salt Rheum, Herpes and similar troubles, and is an infallible cure and the only antidote for that most horrible disease, Contagious Blood Poison.

A record of nearly fifty years of successful cures is a record to be proud of. S. S. S. is more popular today than ever. It numbers its friends by the thousands. Our medical correspondence is larger than ever in the history of the medicine. Many write to thank us for the great good S. S. S. has done them, while others are seeking advice about their cases. All letters receive prompt and careful attention. Our physicians have made a life-long study of Blood and Skin Diseases, and better understand such cases than the ordinary practitioner who makes a specialty of no one disease.

We are doing great good to suffering humanity through our consulting department, and invite you to write us if you have any blood or skin trouble. We make no charge whatever for this service.

By Main strength. Mr. Jowders looked gloomily at the letter to which he had just painfully affixed his signature and then cast a dubious glance at his wife.

"Do you want to just run this over before I send it to son James?" he inquired, and when Mrs. Jowders shook her head he hastily folded the sheet, which bore the marks of hours of toil, and thrust it into an envelope, which he sealed with trembling expedition and then leaned back in his chair with an air of relief.

"I was afraid you'd want to read it, and then most likely 't would be all to do over again, mother, like the last one," he said, "but I'm glad James wrote he didn't mind a word's misapprehension and there. There's some things I can do, but I never could seem to get a good purchase on the system of spelling, some way."

"As I view it," continued Mr. Jowders, "there's some words you can spell by the looks and some you can spell by the sound. Then I can most generally manage, but when you come to spelling by judgment and main strength my chances are about as slim as they make 'em."—St. Louis Republic.
